Alison Bassett represents a broad range of health care providers across all aspects of medical practices and operations, with a focus on transactional work and regulatory compliance.

Alison represents public and private nonprofit health care systems, health care districts, hospitals, primary care clinics, outpatient clinics, medical foundations, county health care programs, management services organizations and physician organizations in a variety of matters ranging from health care restructurings, acquisitions and affiliations, real estate leasing arrangements, and regulatory and compliance issues. She also provides clients with advice and counsel relating to federal health care law and regulations, including the Stark Law and the Anti-Kickback Law, as well as California health care law and regulations (e.g., the Local Health Care District Law).

Alison has over 20 years of combined health care, real estate, corporate, finance, and mergers and acquisitions experience. This includes several years of experience working in-house for a nonprofit health care system in Northern California, where she managed contract negotiations for five hospitals and the system's extensive owned and leased real property portfolio, and 15 years of transactional legal experience servicing public, private and for-profit entities in Southern California and New York. She leverages this extensive transactional experience and her business insight to alleviate risks and assist health care clients in making decisions amid a dramatically evolving regulatory framework.
